

Susan Dingle commenced organ lessons in the sixth form at school, and then continued with organ as her third study, studying with Gordon Phillips on the graduate course at the London College of Music. After a few years of class and instrumental teaching Susan studied for her PGCE at the Roehampton Institute where she specialised in secondary school class music and instrumental teaching in primary and secondary schools.

After a break from lessons for a while Susan found herself at St Giles IOS where she had lessons with Anne Marsden Thomas and other members of the school, gaining her ARCO in 2004.

Susan enjoys running a private instrumental teaching practice in north London and visits two local schools for piano teaching. Susan is the principal organist at St Peter's Grange Park and plays occasionally at Christ Church Cockfosters. Susan gives occasional organ recitals in London and locally.

After meeting Anne one very foggy weekend in the early 1990s at Addington Palace on an RSCM organ teaching course Susan joined the EDOA, and became secretary of the Enfield and District Organist Association Teachers' Forum, founded by Anne.
